Those of a nervous temperament, with but little of the coarse nature, do not need the whip, and will most readily yield obedience to kind and gentle treatment, while those of high courage and strong will, resist control with greater violence and more obstinate energy. The slow, cold-blooded, dtill horse, may work kind and gentle from the first time he is harnessed, while the quick, warm-blooded, sensitive horse, is usually nervous and excitable, and must be "worked in" gradually, and managed with more skill and patience. They are quick to pick up slang. They are quick to pick up slang phrases, and are often easy subjects to be taught vice and immorality. The farmer, himself, is often away on business or is employed in superinbusiness or is employed in superin-tending affairs at a distance from his sons and his hired men. At such times there are free opportunities for the corrupt influence of "evil communications." Again, the hired men often share the appropriate in their resistance, and require not only very carefully, but very thorough treatment and must be made to yield prompt obedience to the control of the bit and overy word of command.—Both Many ten share the same apariment at night with the boys of the family, so that by day and by night, while at work and at rest, the boys and the hired men are together. hired men are together.

The counterpart of this may be found on many Western farms, where the boys have refined parents and are sent to good schools. Their companions on the farm are slovenly in their appearance, uncouth in their manners, lax "The ship may go," said the man: "The ship may go," said the man: "I have lived a poor wretch all my life, but I am determined to die fich."
